Helene van Dijk is an experienced business manager. She had a leading role at different training centers. At the Dutch Standardization Institute, she was responsible for the training and was part of the management team. There she drew the conclusion that the poor communication between people is the cause of why desired culture changes almost always fail. Her open and direct form of communication is an important ingredient for her, and by herself proficient in NLP and Crucial Conversations she has the tools to start a dialogue within an organization. Focused on the best outcome for the organization. She wants to share her knowledge and above all her experiences with others and has decided to proceed independently as Alethos.

Since 2014 Helene has found a new passion. She is studying the world of (stock) trading at the American Stock Exchange. She followed a number of training courses, including courses at Chris Boone and Marcus de Maria, with whom she was a deputy-trainer for over 2 years. Now she is a trainer for the novice trader and she coaches people to become successful in investing and trading. Because Helene has a unique combination of a trader, NLP-coach and CC-trainer she is able to give proper attention to the psychological aspects of trading at the stock market. Students not only learn strategies and how they should be applied, but they also learn what trader profile they have and how they can deal with that.
